Alfonse de Albuquerque Seizes Goa Portugal establishes a trading headquarters on India's west coast.

When Vasco da Gama returned from Calicut in 1499, the Portuguese Monarchy already had a plan to establish trading stations in India. In 1503 Vasco, with a fleet of 14 ships bombarded Calicut and won the 1st naval victory over the Arabs acquiring a secure naval base in the Indian ocean was the work of naval commander Alfonse de Albuquerque who went to India in 1503 and chose as his target GOA, a rich city with good harbor & thriving ship-building industry. He captured GOA in 1510 and also captured the Muslim island of Hormuz at the mouth of the Persian Gulf. He took Malacca in 1511 & gained control of the eastern routes across the Bay of Bengal. In 1514 Portuguese trader put into Canton, the first recorded European visit to China since the start of the Ming dynasty in 1368.
